COMPROMISE SALE

OF

CLOAKS, MANTHLAS AND FURS, FOR THE PORT OF AN ANTHLAS AND FURS, FOR THE WM. BUCHANAN MACKENZIE, New York City.

We are sorry to be compelled to make the above announcement of one of our most enterprising and active merchants in the city, long and universally considered to be the only finished artist in the mantilla and cloak trade in this country. His styles, from the time of his opening the Brandreth Building until the present period, have ever been pronounced by ladies of taste and discrimination, as the first in quality and design in the fashionable world, being manufactured of the very best material which the Paris market affords, and for the repull trade of this city exclusively. This last fact is one which should recommend them to the public in preference to the now prevailing practice of retailing goods made up for the wholesaie trade, for we are well assured that he has earned for his establishment its present popularity by adhering to the above resolution. Having selected the most raise of his scock from the richest of French importations, and in common with tens of thousands of others been overtaken by the stringency of the times, our friend Mackenzie has been compelled to offer his elegant stock at 40 per cent below cost, in order to get back his investment for the rear material. Those desiring the richest goods at the most rearries of prices, will give him a call.—New York Press.
